After all, the lot of the trusts is not wholly a happy one, as the fate of the Cordage trust, the Nail trust, the Copper trust, the Tack trust and the troubles of the Sugar and Coffee trusts show.

It is now said that President McKinley will accept the resignation of Gen. Wade Hampton, as United States Railroad Commissioner, and will appoint Gen. Longstreet, of Georgia, to the place.

There seems to be no limit to the possibilities of modern ingenuity. Especially is this true of the manifold uses to which ordinary paper is applied. Several years ago paper buckets startled the old-fashioned people of this country, but more recently paper underclothing has become the fashion in certain quarters. The latest addition to the paper industry is the making of telegraph and telephone poles. Such poles are in the market, and are reported to be staunch and reliable. resisting all weathers and safely bearing their burdens for economical periods.

It is now Greater New York. When Governor Black signed the charter, the second city of the world sprang into being. The official existence of this giant city will begin January 1, 1898. The first mayor will be elected some time in next November, with a salary of $15,000. Only five States in the Union have greater population than these cities now combined and creating Greater New York-the population being 3,200,000. It might be well cities of New York, Brooklyn, Queens, Richmond and Weschester, are combined into one, forming the new and second in size city of the world. The assessed valuation of the Greater New York is $2,-746,822,942; the city is 35 miles long and

The Comptroller-General has just completed the compilation of some interesting figures as to the amount of business done in fire and life insurance in the tics show that there are sixty-four comhave made reports. The insurance written in the State during 1896 amounted to $646,472; the losses incurred $282,657. These figures show that fire insurance companies, as the premiums exceed the losses by $363,815. In life insurance there are forty-four companies doing business in the State. The amount of insurance written during 1896 was $17,-125,843; premiums received were $593, 149, and losses were $589,373, leaving a narrow margin of profit of $3,776.

The pension matter is getting to be one of the most serious questions with which the State has to deal. The safeguards thrown around the law are found to be insufficient to keep out the great number who are crowding in and sapping the the appropriation to the exclusion of those for whom it was intended. The pro rata for whose relief the pension law was enacted is reduced to a mere pittance, and the bulk of the money goes to those who are able to make a living. The State would be glad were it able to pension all the old soldiers and widows of soldiers. irrespective of their necessities, but since it cannot do so now, the next best thingan appropriation for the relief of the absolutely indigent-is done. It is for these, and these only, that the money was appropriated, as we understand it, and not for such as are able to earn a support, whether they do it or not. Already the pension roll contains too many unworthy persons; that is to say, persons who have gotten there by fraud, and more will get The various township boards, well as the County boards, have a hard and thankless task, and we sympathize with them as they try to draw the line between duty to the State on the one hand and sy mpathy for their old comrades on the other. The law as it stands is open to many abuses, and it is safe to say it will be very materially amended by the Legislature next winter.

No. 9.

LONDON, ENGLAND, May 4, 1897. EDITORS INTELLIGENCER: The "country girl," you see, has left Paris at last and come to London, the stately, dignified, solemn old city. It certainly forms a strong contrast to Paris—the giddypate. It is only since being here this lime that I realize the very great differtime that I realize the very great differ-ence between the French and the English. The English are so serious and business, the French so happy and careless. I'm not sure that I do not prefer gay Paris.
I have come to London this time under very fortunate circumstances; I am with just what ought to be seen. I must tell you many interesting things of what I have seen and heard in the past week. I left Paris Thursday morning, a lovely Spring day, and as I drove to the station I would say "Good-bye, Sister," to the blue-clad 'Little Sisters of the Poor," an order of Nuns, and "Good-bye, Father," to the black-robed priests, Francis-cans, and the brown-mantled, bare-footed Capucines. I was sorry to see the last of the old woman who knits at the door of "Our Lady of the Fields," and the redfaced woman who drinks up her own re-freshments on the bridge de la Concorde. I passed right through the loveliest part of Paris. From the Champs Elysees I had seen the Mardi Gras and Mi-Careme; I had gone there for the great Salon, and I was very sad when I said good-bye to Cleopatra's needle, which stands there I was packed into a tiny little coach, locked in, the "machine whistled" and we were off. The last I saw of Paris was the Eiffel Tower, standing up straight and tall in the bright sunshine. Clouds chased each other over the valley of the Seine, and the Scenery was so beautiful. Every spot of ground is beautifully culti-vated. They plough two oxen tandem. and their farm implements are curious to behold. But you must admire their thrift which makes the most of every inch

When the Cathedral of Rouen came in when the Cathedral of Rouel same in sight I began to look out for my friends who were to join me there, and sure enough they came on board. We found a carriage and ate our lunch very comfortably before we got to Dieppe. The train passed through the narrow, quaint old streets of the city and right out into old streets of the city and right out into sea, apparently, to the end of the pier. The tide was low, so we had to climb down a pretty steep gangway into the boat, and set out for "Merrie England" under very favorable circumstances. The Channel was as smooth as glass, and contrary to our expectations, none of us were aick at all. On the train from New Haven to London I noticed the marked difference in climate from that of "sunny France." I was extremely cold, and the leaves were just beginning to put out, while in Paris the chestnut trees, which shade the entire city, were covered with their white and red blossoms.

Well, I went for a morning's walk in London, and came upon what I have al-ways wanted to see, "The Old Curiosity Shop," which stands near Lincoln Inn's Shop," which stands near Lincoln Inc's Fields. Then we went into the Royal Courts of Law, went into the gallery and heard a very interesting suit of libel. The parties were a "Mrs. Davidson," who was in the witness box, and a "Mr. Brumley," who was suing her for saying that he "used to go about with a pianette drawn by a white donkey." A lawyer in a black robe and an immense white curled wig with two curly pig tails hanging down his back, cross-questioned Mrs. Davidson, and dwelt upon the "pianette" and the "white donkey" till everybody roared. And all the other white wigs wrote down what she said, and a Judge in the biggest wig of all tried to keep order. biggest wig of all tried to keep order. After we came out the official offered us a peep at the Lord High Chancellor of England, and we took the peep and paid sixpence for it. And he was a fat, little, red-faced man with a round black plaster in the top of his wig; he wore a red scarf over his black robe. The Court room he

We walked past the house from which Charles I was executed. There is a statue to "the Royal Martyr," as they call him, in Trafalgar Square, which is Nelson's The first of May, you know, opens the

On May-day the nor-ses and cabbies are decked out in bright ribbons and flags, and in the country villages they have the May pole dance and other May-day celebrations. In France the Churches are all decorated with flowers for the "Month of Mary," as they call May. Every morning now the Parks are full of carriages of the society people-that is their time of day for driv-

I am going to tell you a fairy tale, One afternoon, about two o'clock, I was walking down crowded Piccadilly, when I saw quiet green meadow, where a flock of lay on the grass in the sunshine. I turned into the meadow and followed a winding white path which led me by the banks o a little lake. I was looking at the ducks standing on their heads in the water, and wondering how they did it, when I heard music. I lifted my eyes, and there, just a little way off, I saw a beautiful palace, and all around it as far as I could see was a crowd of people. I hurried on and saw a broad avenue leading up to the palace gates, and lining the avenue were the splendid big soldiers of the Queen's Body Guard, every one of whom is six feet tall. They all sat like statues, on fine black horses. The soldiers' uniform is white leather breeches, red and gold jackets and and life are protected, still the drain on the resources of the citizens is a large one. Taking fire insurance, the statisgates was the Royal Band, the members panies doing business in the State which sic was splendid. Thousands of people crowded the edges of the two streets that led to the palace, and had to be kept back by mounted soldiers and a police guard. $14,039,949; the premiums paid were I asked a policeman what it all means and he said, "It's the Queen's Drawing-Room." Hundreds of elegant carriages "It's the Queen's Drawingbusiness in the State is profitable to the livery and wearing immense bunches of roses, lillies and every flower you ever saw. Inside the carriages were women in gorgeous evening dresses, and there was always one in white with ostrich feathers in her hair. That is the regula-tion costume of those who are to be "presented" to the Queen. The train of her there are other items which she must religiously observe I was very glad to be able to see something of this ceremony, for I had always heard that it was very interesting. I found I was in St. James Park, and that the palace was Buckingham, the Queen's town residence. The sovereigns used to live at St. James Palace, and that is why the court is called the "Court of St. James." But H M. Queen Victoria has always lived at Buckingham. Another reason why London is gay, is the Queen's jubilee. Every window and every point of vantage for seeing the grand procession has been secured long ago. The hotels have all put on fabulous prices, and Lon-on will be packed and jammed.

This is a most beautifully governed city. The driving is so careful that no-body seems to get run over. Paris is so different in that respect, but both are and everybody keeps to the left, so you always know what to expect when you ross a street. They seem awfully slow and behind the times to us Americans.

I will write more of London next time

ANDERSON'S NEW COURT HOUSE.

The above cut represents the "perspective view" of Anderson's new Court louse, which will be erected in the Public Square. The Committee selected this design from quite a number submitted by various Architects from Atlanta, Louisville, Columbia, Chattanooga and Charlotte. The Committee was cautious, as they consumed four days in considering the merits of each plan, after having visited quite a number of buildings built from plans prepared by the competing Architects. When the vote was taken it was unanimous for Architect Milburn's plan. He is now preparing the working plans for the Court House and also the Jail. They will be on file about June 10th for the contractors to figure on. This building will be 70x30 feet, Flemish in general treatment, with four entrances, granite foundations, buff press brick facade with granite buff stone and Terra Cotta trimmings. The exterior will have a heautiful finish on all four sides, with modern treatment for buff press brick facade with granite buff stone and Terra Cotta trimmings. The exterior will have a beautiful finish on all four sides, with modern treatment for public buildings. The roof will be covered with slate, steel ceilings, iron stairways, with ornamental grille work. The main or first floor is arranged for the County officers, with three fire-proof record rooms, one for Clerk, Probate Judge and Auditor, where the records will be safe in case of fire. The second floor has the main Court room, (with gallery in rear,) two Jury rooms, Grand Jury room, three witness rooms, School Superintendent's room and Judge's room, all conveniently arranged for the County's business. The basement will have lavatories, janitor, fuel and boiler rooms. The building will have steam heat, (low pressure,) oak finish, electric wiring and modern in every respect. This will be the 39th Court House designen by the Architect, and the public can reasonably expect a handsome as well as substantial building. A local builder will be selected by the Architect to see that the walls are properly constructed, and to aid the Committee in protecting the County's interest in carrying out the plans and specifications to the letter. The County's interest in carrying out the plans and specifications to the letter. The Court House will cost $27,000 and the Jail $8,000. Contractors will be here from various cities to bid on the construction, and the Committee will award contract, work will be commenced and pushed to rapid completion. Anderson County will have one of the best Court Houses in the State, constructed of first-class material.

Council of the Episcopal Church.

The 107th Annual Council of the Episcopal Church brought many distinguished guests into our city. Generals and Judges, Doctors of Divinity and Doctors of Medicine, prominent lawyers and business men, earnest young ministers and laymen made up the personnel of this body.

The Council convened Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, Bishop Ellison Capers, better known to us as Gen. Capers, presided over the Council, which was opened with a most impressive ser-vice, thirty of the clergy were vested and with the Bishop marched from the Rectory into the Church singing that grand old Catholic hymn in which all Christians can join,
"The Church's one foundation,

Is Jesus Christ her Lord." The procession was indeed most beautifal and impressive. Morning prayer was read, and Holy Communion administered. The Rev. Mr. Tillinghast preachover his black robe. The Court room he occupied was labelled Queen's Bench, and we decided that the Queen had a very shabby little Bench indeed.

Just off the busy, noisy Strand, in a quiet little court is the Temple Church, one of the oldest in London. There we saw the grave of Oliver Goldsmith, and the tombs of the old Knights Templars, with their effigies lving cross-legged to unworthy communicants. His text was Walk about Zion and go round about her, tell the towers thereof. Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces that ye may tell it to the generations fol-'-Psalm 48: 12 and 13. After the religious exercises the Bishop called the Council to order. The work of the Council was to arrange the finances

> ing year. The members of the Council say that much important and telling work was interests of their Church. During the meeting of the Council much interest and some debate was excited by the following resolutions, which were introduced by Gen. Edward McCrady and adopted by the Council: Whereas, the growing disregard of hu-man life has caused the crime of homicide to become more and more prevalent and flagrant in our land until the blood guiltiness of our people has become an offense and crying shame to the sensibilities of the Church and State, and believing that public opinion should be greatly influ-enced and can be most safely formed Resolved. That this council do express > some public sentiment upon this most Resolved, further, that the bishop be requested to call upon the clergy of the diocese to preach upon some Sunday to be appointed by bim against the awful ble evil, and in order to arouse a whole-equested to issue an address, praying in the name of this council, the co-operation of the clergy of all churches and religious denominations in this effort and requesting them to join the clergy of the Church upon one day to be appointed in preaching upon one subject and appealing to the people of the State to put away the curse of blood-guiltiness which cries out, alas, from the land against us.

On Tuesday night Rev. W. E. Evans, Rector of Trinity Church, Columbia, preached a stirring sermon. His subject was Sin renders worship ineffectual. Text Isa. 1: 15, "And when ye spread forth your hands I will hide mine eyes from you, yea when ye make many prayers I will not hear: your hands are

On Wednesday night missionary addresses were in order. From these re-ports we learn that even in our own land, where the Light of God, the Light of the world, has been for centuries shining upon our Carolina, yet that there are even thousands who still walk in darkness because the light has not yet been cast in their paths. The voice of the Gospel of the good news has not reached

On Thursday night the Rev. Mr. Gorden, of Edgefield, preached a most instructive and thoughtful sermon. His subject was, "Our Witness for Christ." Text Acts 1: 8. "Ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem and in all Judea and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. Friday night Rev. Byron Holley, of Greenville, gave us a deeply spiritual and helpful sermon. His subject was, "The Search Lights of God." Text Psalm 139, 23—24: "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me and know my thoughts, and see if there be any wicked way in me and lead me in the way everlasting!" This sermon must make any man think. His heart and his con-science must feel afraid when the power of God's all-searching eye is so clearly and powerfully illustrated. Mr. Holley does this most strikingly and beautifully by comparing God's power to throw on the light with our modern search lights, which is used in ever baffling the great iron-clads.

The Council adjourned Friday afternoon at 5 30. Upon the unanimous and very hearty vote of the Council, the following resolution was adopted: Resolved, That the very sincere thanks of this Council be extended to the Rector and congregation of Grace Church, and to the entire community, for the cordial and generous hospitality extended to the delegates in attendance our visitors, and are delighted to know that our city captured them.

AN HISTORIC LEGEND

Many, many moons ago, when young ambition slept and dresmed in the bosom of many a drawsy tradesman hereabouts, and strong handed competition had not yet raised the magic wand which invites and incites the bargain hunter from the four winds of old earth to come and be sated, there chanced this way a weary, weary pilgrim, who became enchanted weary pilgrim, who became enchanted with the lovely garden spot which the red skins had deserted. On his breast he were this ensign, 'I lead, let those follow who will." On his brow was stamped in scarlet letters this significant word— "DEFYANCE."

A smile of welcome lit up his countenance, and soon it was heralded through hill and dale that a new General was in the field, and one born to lead. And for eight years past the indomitable C. S. MINOR and the TEN CENT STORE have led the van, and cut their road through the solid walls of Competition. and planted their banner above the dismantled hopes of Competition. We drive the bargains home with such sledge-ham-Large Standard Lumps, fourteen inches high, 13c.
